New book:

Secret nuclear government bunkers. REGAN VEST & how NATO prepared for World War III.

Poul Holt Pedersen and Karsten Hvam Pedersen, have written two books and several articles about the Danish secret bunkers and preparedness planning during the Cold War. One of the books became a bestseller in Denmark. Accordingly, they have written an English book: Secret nuclear government bunkers. REGAN VEST & how NATO prepared for World War III.

The book describes how NATO expected member states to build secret nuclear-proof government bunkers and prepare a community that could function during states of emergency and under the worst possible conditions.

The book is based on Denmark's deepest secret: the underground bunker for the government and the Royal House – the government bunker REGAN VEST and the community that was ready to be activated during a state of emergency or war.

The nature and details of these arrangements have remained hidden.

The book also describes crisis management facilities of other NATO countries – including the bunker for the United States Senate and House of Representatives as well as Canadian bunkers, West German, British and more.

These bunkers are built to withstand a nuclear war and store supplies for several weeks of residence. They are also equipped with their own water and power supply, hospital, radio station and conference facilities.
